DECISION CONTESTS SHOULD AID BOXING

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)
New York, Jan. 28.—New York state still yearns for law that will legalize boxing and really make it a decent sport. Some law that will give the sport a standing in the largest community in the country is being eagerly sought.

Assemblyman Marty McCue, a former squared circle fighter, is one of the strongest supporters for a bill and he has framed another for presentation to the legislature. Back in the days of the Frawley law, when some of the greatest fights in the history of the game were pulled out under the no-decision force law that had been spread on the books, there was too much chance for petty graft. There also was too much chance for stalling boxers to make life unpleasant for the suffering public. The law died a natural death. Any new law that passes and is expected to have a life of more than a few short months must combine other features. And that is the goal for which legislators are striving.

Whether or not the new law will have a decision feature can't be predicted at this time. But there are certain members of the New York state legislature who believe allowing decisions would make the game cleaner and in a measure remove from the old complaining days.

MANY SCHOOLS ENTER BASKETBALL TOURNEY

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)
Appleton, Wis., Jan. 28.—Thirty-five entrance certificates have been received from different high schools in the state for the fourteenth annual championship basketball tournament to be conducted under the auspices of Lawrence college, March 20, 21 and 22.

More entries are expected within the next week as no certificates will be accepted after Feb. 5. Comparative score cards will be sent next week to all schools which have entered. The cards are to be filled out by the schools and returned at the end of the season. These will give the committee basis on which to judge the best teams of the state and the eight teams having the best records will be the ones chosen to compete here.

BREWER FANS DID HOPE FOR GEORGE

George McBride.

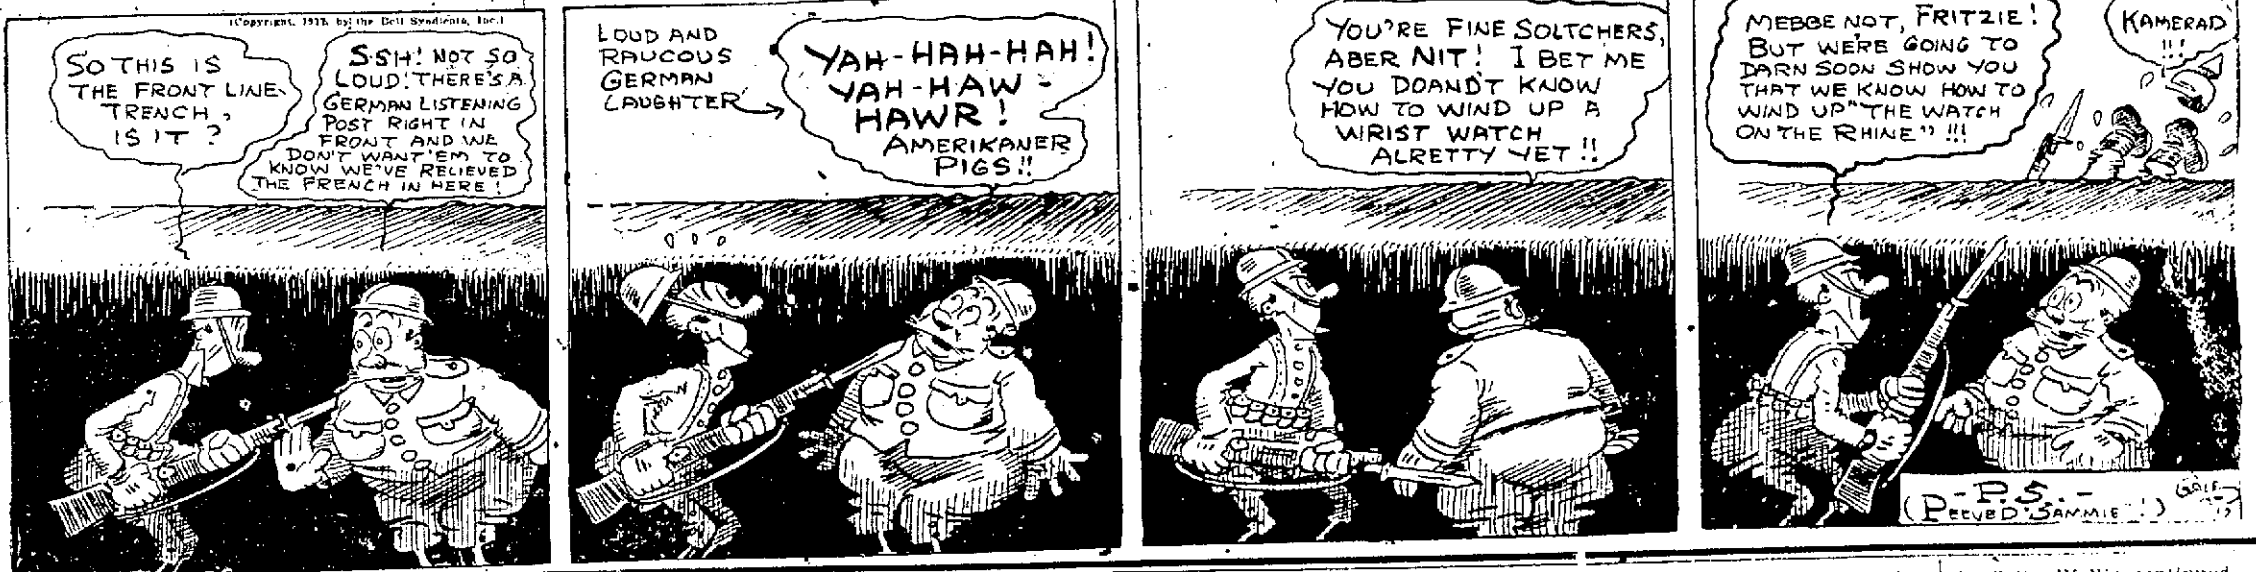

Now that the Milwaukee management has picked New Egan to lead the Brewers next season the fans will have to be satisfied, but they had greatly hoped that George McBride of the Washington Senators would be the selection. McBride is a local son, the product of Milwaukee and lots, and a great favorite.

TOUGH TIMES FOR A. A. PITCHERS THIS YEAR! NO QUEER SHOTS GO

The American Association pitchers are to have a sad time of it this season. Spittballs, shineballs, emeryballs, and all the other queer deliveries will be strictly prohibited. Last season it was quite the other way and anything at all went. The A. A. pitchers made the batters most unhappy all through the race. This year the batters will have their revenge. Many of the pitchers who made the best records last season are so dependent on trick deliveries that they are sure to suffer this year when the fancy stuff in the box is tabooed.

MORRIS MILLER

The present winter league has had a higher average of rumors than any for some while. Trades and deals have been many enough, but not satisfied with these the magnates and managers have gathered in bunches at every opportunity and told each other what they might have done had they really tried. Rumors as to why Hornsby, Sisler, Walter Johnson or

MAX Carey have not been sold or traded have been especially rife. Every disappointed club owner has sent forth a rumor to secure his alibi and the result has been a great deal of wild word. Many of them will be more at ease when the season is once more well under way and the many rumored deals and changes may be forgotten for a while.

Howard Ehmke's enlistment will mean considerable of a hole in the Detroit pitching staff, which has been none too strong for several seasons. Jennings is hoping that Harry Culver's can stage a comeback.

Miller Huggins will return to New York about February 1 and remain in charge of Yankee affairs until March, when the first of his players leave for the training camp.

Now that the Red Sox have lined up all of the old Athletics, you might say, except Connie Mack, they are regarded as strong bidders for a pennant this season. Frazee, the Boston owner, who used to be in the theatrical business, says that baseball in most respects is the same as the theater. "You can't fill the seats with a poor attraction and this is as true of baseball as the show business," says Frazee. "Boston has been brought up to expect winners in the American league and the only way to get on here is to give 'em the class. When the war emptied several important places in our lineup I simply had to go or play to poor business. Rather than waste quite a bit on players of no established standing I chose to risk a bit. And that's why we've gone after some of the best in the game. We may possibly fail to grab the rag next season, but I'm sure we'll make the game interesting for the fans, both here and on the road."

Hot Springs and Jacksonville will each entertain two major league teams during the training season. The Red Sox and Robins go to the Arkansas city, while the Mackmen and Pirates will train at Jacksonville.

Harry Frazee needs only to engage Connie Mack as manager and the picture will be almost complete. Eight of Mack's one time champions are to wear Red Sox uniforms next season.

Mike O'Dowd has the right spirit for a champion. Though he is soon to enter the army, Mike has decided to engage in one real battle before marching away and he has picked Harry Greb as his opponent. In so doing he is bumping into a most tough customer. There is any number of set-ups and second raters that O'Dowd might meet in the way that has been so popular with other champs. But he prefers to show that he is every inch a champ and so he is going up against Greb. It's safe to say that Greb will give the champ plenty to do. And O'Dowd is giving Greb an advantage in weight, at that. This is enough to give any champion distinction.

MAY QUIT GAME TO FIGHT THE FLAMES

Jimmy Walsh.

Jimmy Walsh, the Red Sox outfielder, has a job in the fire department of his home town of Syracuse, N. Y., and he likes it so well that he may not return to the game this summer. If he doesn't care to play with Boston there are several other teams that would be pleased to have him, as Jimmie is just over the draft

GREAT FUTURITY FOR FOALS TO BE RENEWED

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)
Louisville, Ky., Jan. 28.—Renewal of the Great Futurity for foals of 1918 was decided at the annual stockholders' meeting of the Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders' Association held in Lexington. It was also decided that other divisions of the famous event hereafter will be raced in best two-mile heats in three. This has been the rule for the two-year-old division, but the three-year-old event has been decided on the three-in-five heat plan. The change will go into effect with the racing of 1921.

Absolute Patriotism.
Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 28.—A spirit of absolute patriotism and a desire to help this country to victory by scientific discoveries that will save life, was manifest throughout the convention of the National Association of Anatomists," said Dr. Ivan E. Wallin, assistant professor of anatomy at Marquette university school of medicine, who recently returned from attending the meeting of anatomists in Minneapolis.

"All research work is in that direction," Dr. Wallin continued. "Restoration, artificial respiration, the effect of shell shock and its cure and other problems of that kind. To their solution all clinical and laboratory work is being directed. At the big banquet the spirit of patriotism was absolute and every man present seemed resolved to contribute to the store of knowledge that would help win the war."

Long Live The King

And here it was that NIKKY happened on the thing that was to take him far that night, and bring about many curious things. Not far about him two men were talking. They were talking, however, using his free arm, on which hung a cane, to gesture. The other walked with bent head.

NIKKY, pausing to light a cigarette, felt behind him. The wind was tricky, and with his thin march he stepped into a stone archway, lighted his cigarette, but need his music high against the still, and entered to a silent but silent struggle just ahead. The two men had been attacked by

BETTER THAN CALOMEL

Thousands Have Discovered Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a Harmless Substitute

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. They are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel. His efforts to banish it brought out these little olive-colored tablets.

The pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does, but have no bad after-effects. They do not injure the teeth like strong liquids or calomel. They take away the trouble and quickly correct it. Why cure the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids. It is best not to take calomel, but to let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place. Most headaches come from constipation and a disordered liver. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "lousy" and "heavy." Note how they "clear" clouded brain and how they "perk up" the spirits. 10c and 25c a box. All druggists.

three others, and as he stared, the loquacious one went down. Instantly a huge figure of a man outlined against the light from a street lamp, crouched over the prostrate form of the fallen man. Even in the imperceptible second before he started to run toward the group, Nikky saw that the silent one, unmolested, was looking on.

A moment later he was in the thick of things and fighting gloriously. His suddenly cap fell off. His fair hair bristled with excitement. He flung out arms that were both furious and strong, and with each blow the group assumed a new formation. Unluckily, a great deal of the fighting was done over the prostrate form of Peter Niburg.

But disaster, inglorious disaster, waited for Nikky. Peter Niburg, face down on the pavement, was groaning, and Nikky had felled one man and was starting on a second with the fighting appetite of twenty-three, when something happened. One moment Nikky was smiling, with a cut lip, and in the next he was being held by the back of his head, and he was dropped like an ox by a blow from behind. Landing between his shoulder blades, it jerked his head back with a snap, and sent him reeling. A second followed, delivered by a huge fist.

Down went Nikky, and lay still. The town slept on. Street brawls were not uncommon, especially in the neighborhood of the Hungaria. Those who roused grumbled about quarrelsome students, and slept again.

Perhaps two minutes later, Nikky got up. He was another minute in locating himself. His cap lay in the gutter. Beside him, on his back, lay a sprawling and stertorous figure, with, so quick, the downfall, a cane still hooked to his arm.

Nikky bent over Peter Niburg. Bending over made his head ache abominably. "Here, man," he said. "Get up! Rouse yourself!" Peter Niburg made an inarticulate reference to a piece of silk of certain quality, and lay still. But his eyes opened slowly, and he stared up at the stars. "A fine night," he said thickly. "A very fine—" Suddenly he raised himself to a sitting posture. Terror gave him strength. "I've been robbed," he said. "Robbed. I am ruined. I am dead."

"Tut," said Nikky, mopping his cut lip. "If you are dead, your spirit speaks with an uncommonly lusty voice! Come, get up. We present together a shameful picture of defeat."

But he raised Peter Niburg gently from the ground and, finding his knees unstable, from fight or weakness, stood him against a house wall. Peter Niburg, with rolling eyes, felt for his letter, and the saltness he praised, found it.

"Ah," he said, and straightened up. "After all, it is not so bad as I feared. They got nothing." He made a manful effort to walk, but tottered, reeled. Nikky caught him. "Careful!" he said. "The colossus was doubtless the one who got us both, and we are likely to feel his weight for some time. Where do you live?" Peter Niburg was not for saying. He would have preferred to pursue his solitary life in uncertainty. But Nikky was no half Samaritan. Toward Peter Niburg's lodging, then, they made a slow progress.

"These recent gentlemen," said Nikky, as they went along, "they are, perhaps, personal enemies?" Peter Niburg reflected. He thought not. "But I know why they came," he said unguardedly. "Some early morning, my friend, you will hear of a man lying dead in the street. That man will be I."

"The thought has a moral," observed Nikky. "Do not trust yourself out-of-doors at night."

But he saw that Peter Niburg kept his hand over his breast pocket. Never having dealt in mysteries, Nikky was slow at recognizing one. But he reflected, many things were going on in the old city in these troubled days. Cudge to Nikky, all at once, that this man on his arm might be one of the hidden eyes of government.

"These are difficult times," he ventured, "for those who are loyal." Peter Niburg gave him a sidelong glance. "Difficult indeed," he said briefly.

"I think," Nikky observed, "that, after I see you safely home, I shall report this small matter to the police." But here Peter Niburg turned even. "Not—not the police?" he panted.

"But why? You and I, my friend, will carry their insignia for some days. I have a mind to pay our debts." Peter Niburg considered. He stopped and faced Nikky. "I do not wish the police," he said. "Perhaps I have said too little. This is a private matter. An affair of jealousy."

"I see!" "Naturally, not a matter for publicity." "Very well," Nikky assented. But in his mind was rising dark suspicion. He had stumbled on something. He cursed his stupidity that it meant, so far, nothing more than a mystery to him. He did not pride himself on his intelligence.

"You were not alone, I think?" Peter Niburg suddenly remembered Herdan, and stopped.

"Your friend must have escaped." "He would escape," said Peter Niburg scornfully. "He is of the type that runs."

He lapsed into sullen silence. Soon he paused before a quiet house, one of the many which housed in cavernous depths uncounted clerks, and other small fry of the city. "Good night to you," said Peter Niburg. Then, rather tardily, "And my thanks. But for you I should now—" he shrugged his shoulders.

"Good night, friend," said Nikky. "And better keep your bed tomorrow." He had turned away and Peter Niburg entered the house.

Nikky inspected himself in the glow of a street lamp. Save for some dust, and a swollen lip, which he could not see, he was not unrepresentable. Well enough, anyhow, for the empty streets. But before he started he looked the house and the neighborhood over carefully. He might wish to return to that house.

For two hours he walked, and resumed his interrupted train of thought. At last, having almost circled the city, he came to the Cathedral. It was nearly midnight by the clock in the high tower. He stopped and consulted his watch. The fancy took him to go up the high steps, and look out over the city from the colonnade.

Once there, he stood leaning against a column, looking out. There was someone coming along the quiet streets, with a stealthy, shuffling gait that caught his attention. So, for instance, might a weary or a wounded man drag along. Exactly so, indeed, and Peter Niburg shambled into his house but two hours gone.

The footsteps paused, hesitated, commenced a painful struggle up the ascent. Nikky moved behind his column, and waited. Up and up, weary step after weary step. The shadowy figure, coming close, took a form, became a man—became Peter Niburg. Now, indeed, Nikky roused. Beaten and sorely bruised, Peter Niburg should have been in bed. What stealthy business of the night brought him out?

Fortunately for Nikky's hiding place, the last step or two proved too much for the spy. He groaned, and sat down painfully, near the top. His head lolled forward, and he supported it on two shaking hands. Thus he sat, huddled and miserable, for five minutes or thereabouts. The chime rang out the hour. At ten minutes past the hour, Nikky heard the engine of an automobile.

No machine came in sight, but the throbbing kept on, from which he judged that a car had been stopped around the corner. Peter Niburg heard it, and rose. A moment later a man, with the springiness of youth, mounted the steps and confronted the messenger.

Nikky saw a great light. When Peter Niburg put his hand to his breast pocket, there was no longer room for thought, nor, for that matter, time for thinking. As a matter of fact, never afterward could Nikky recall thinking at all. He moved away quietly, hidden by the shadows of the colonnade. Behind him, on the steps, the two men were talking. Absorbed in themselves and their business, they neither heard nor saw the figure that slipped through the colonnade, and dropped, a blood curdling drop, from the high end of it to the street below.

Nikky's first impulse, beside the car, was to cut a tire. By getting his opponent into a stooping position, over the damaged wheel, it would be easier to overcome him. But a hasty search revealed that he had lost his knife in the melee. And second thought gave him a better plan. After all, to get the letter was not everything. To know its destination would be important. He had no time to think further. The messenger was coming down the steps, not stealthily, but clattering, with the ring of nails in the heels of heavy boots.

Nikky flung his long length into the tounneau, and there crouched. It was dark enough to conceal him, but Nikky's was a large body in a small place. However, the chauffeur only glanced at the car, kicked a tire with a practiced foot, and got on.

He headed for the open country. Very soon his passenger knew that he was in for a long ride possibly, a cold ride certainly. Within the city limits the car moved decorously, but when the suburbs were reached, the driver put on all his power. He drove carefully, too, as one who must make haste but cannot afford accident.

Nikky grew very uncomfortable. His long legs ached. The place between the shoulders where the conclave had landed his powerful blows throbbed and beat. Also he was puzzled, and he hated being puzzled. He was unarmed, too. He disliked that most of all.

After a time he raised his head. He made out that they were going east, toward the mountains, and he cursed the luck that had left his revolver at home. Still he had no plan but to watch. Two hours' ride, at their present rate, would take them over the border and into Karnia.

With a squealing of brakes the machine drew up at the frontier. Here was a chain across the highway, with two sets of guards. Long before they reached it, a sentry stepped into the road and waved his lantern.

Dinner Stories

The young lawyer was very sure of himself, and believed in bullying witnesses. "You are a laborer, I believe," he said to the quietly dressed man in the box.

"A workman, sir," said the man, who was a civil engineer. "With pick and shovel," said the lawyer, insolently. "Those are not the chief implements of my trade," said the man. "What are the chief implements, then?"

"I wouldn't help you if I told you," said the workman. "You don't understand their nature or their use." "Probably not, but I insist on knowing what they are," said the lawyer.

"Well, if you insist," said the man—"brains!"

In a Vermont town they tell of a sailor who, after some years of devotion, finally proposed to the lady of his choice. "But Henry," protested the lady, "this is really sudden. You had better give me a week to think it over!"

"Very well, my dear," said Henry. "And," after due reflection, he added, "perhaps it would be better if I thought it over myself at the same time!"

"I just love being here," said Bobbie. "What do you like best about it?" asked the good farmer's wife. "You haven't any bathroom in the house," said Bobbie.

"You say this man brought a load of whisky into dry territory?" "Yes, your honor."

"Well, didn't you seize the stuff?" "Well, your honor, we had no stomach pump."

Orfordville News

Orfordville, Jan. 26.—"The best laid schemes of mice and men gang aft agley." The people of this vicinity, for the past week, have been busy preparing for a farewell banquet for Rev. H. C. Rogers and wife, "in appreciation of their work in this community." All details had been perfected, and up to Friday evening upwards of two hundred tickets had been sold, and everyone, not only in the village, but in the outlying districts, was anxious to show their regard and respect for them. The gathering was to be directly under the management of the Red Cross and the program constituted a part of the evening's entertainment: The Star-Spangled Banner, audience solo; Mrs. W. T. Green; "A Tribute to our Boys Master," a Boy Scout, in behalf of the community; H. F. Silverthorn; solo; Dr. J. S. Johnson; in behalf of sister churches; Rev. Ivan Ramseth; in behalf of the Methodist church; Chas. Taylor; in behalf of the Red Cross of Rock County; W. H. Daugherty, of Janesville; solo; Dr. J. S. Johnson; responses and benediction; Rev. H. C. Rogers; America, audience.

During the night the "weather man" stepped in and sent a blizzard—old-fashioned, furious and lasting—having it was thought best by those having the matter in charge to call it off. While this will be a distinct disappointment to many, it will nevertheless serve to impress Mr. and Mrs. Rogers, if such were necessary, with a knowledge of the existing ties of friendship and esteem in which they are held by an unusually large number of friends.

The rural carrier from the office was obliged to abandon his route on Saturday after a futile attempt to cover the east end bound freight on Saturday morning became submerged in a drift about a mile west of the village. Later an engine and car came from Janesville and took all shovellers that could be secured and after several hours of hard work the imprisoned train was released.

Bennett Thon, with a ton of milk for the Monroe car, was stuck in the drift east of the village for several hours on Saturday.

SHARON. Sharon, Jan. 26.—The Red Cross society sent two boxes of finished goods to headquarters the last of the week.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Goeler of Walworth, visited at the home of his brother, Charles, and family one day the last of the week.

Rev. Chester is very ill and threatened with pneumonia.

J. Walter Strong, circulating manager of the Gazette, was in town Saturday, transacting business in connection with that paper.

Rev. Perry Millar, district superintendent, came Saturday and held the second quarterly conference at the M. E. church on Saturday evening.

Milton Junction, Jan. 28.—The entertainment for the Red Cross benefit under the auspices of the P. O. was well attended. Each number furnished by the various societies in town and by the school children was much enjoyed. The committee report about fifty dollars cleared.

Cut Out Coupon Below--Worth Twenty-Five Cents To You

Good, at Local Druggists, as Long as the Free Supply Lasts, for One 25-cent Package of the External "Vapor" Treatment That Relieves Colds Over Night Croup in 15 Minutes.

Each Local Druggist Will Give Away 60 Free Packages, 12 of Which Are Full Size 25-cent Jars.

Fifteen years ago, in a little North Carolina town a druggist discovered a process of combining the old-fashioned remedies—Camphor, Turpentine and Menthol—with certain volatile oils such as Eucalyptus, Thyme, Cubeb and Juniper, so that, when applied externally, the body heat would vaporize these ingredients. These vapors, inhaled all night long, carry the medication, with each breath, direct to the air passages and lungs.

Today this vapor treatment, Vick's VapoRub, is almost universally used throughout the South in preference to internal "dosing." It is quick in its action, and what is more important, particularly to mothers with small children, it is applied externally and hence does not disturb the most delicate stomach. Colds are easiest treated at the beginning and VapoRub makes the ideal preventive for the entire family.

For very severe chest colds, croup, bronchitis or incipient pneumonia, wet towels should first be placed over the parts, to open the pores of the skin and then use VapoRub.

For colds, croup, or whooping cough, rub a little VapoRub in the nostrils or melted in spoon and the vapors inhaled.

The manufacturers know that the actual trial is the best way to show how valuable VapoRub is in the home and they have accordingly furnished each druggist in Janesville with free packages, to be given away in presentation of the coupon below.

GOOD AT YOUR DRUGGIST for a free package of Vick's VapoRub, as long as the free supply lasts. Each Druggist has 60 packages, 12 of which are full size 25-cent jars, to be given to the first twelve presenting coupons. Only one sample allowed each family.
